④ Estimated population of Taito City

Based on the Basic resident registration, we have set the demographic trends from 2009 to 2013 as the standard. For Japanese population, we calculated by Cohort factor method and for foreign population, we calculated by Cohort rate of change method.

Japanese estimated population which has released in 2012 from National social insurance and institute of population problem had showed the future Japanese population was long term depopulation and further birth rate declining and aging trends. Despite of those results, the estimation of Taito city, showed that both Japanese and foreign residents of Taito city would be increasing, and it would exceed 190,000 people in 2016, and it would reach 201,000 people in 2024.

The breakdown of the residents would be youth population (age under 15) and productive age population (age over to 15 to 64) would tend to increase. Although aging population (age over 65) may increase for a while, although it would decrease slowly in 2018. The population ratio would be youth population remains the same level, but productive population tends to increase and aging population tends to decrease.
